

2012 Olympic Games

With less than 12 months until the London 2012 Olympic Games organisations and community groups (within the West Midlands area) are already making plans to ensure the Olympic Games is a memorable event for the region.

West Midlands Police are working with partner agencies and local community groups to maximise our police and community engagement both in the run up and during the Olympic games.

Churches will obviously play a fundamental part in energising and connecting people together within their local community.

West Midlands Police have been linking in with the International Organisation 'More Than Gold' and more locally 'Youth For Christ'. Neighbourhood officers are keen to offer support to local churches and further engage with the local community in which they serve.

Have you been appointed a 'More Than Gold' Champion in your local church?

Would you and your church like to work with your local police to perhaps organise a community event in celebration of the Olympic Games or just embrace the Olympic values as a way of further reaching out to local people?

Would you be willing to pass on the details of your local church to Bev Layton or Nicki Biddlestone (based in the Local Policing Department at West Midlands Police HQ) so that they can provide you with a contact name and number of your local neighbourhood officer.
